2. General Information...

University of West Florida is looking for individuals with master's degrees to be adjunct professors. As programs are growing the University seems to have fairly constant opportunities for folks in the area to teach programming, information technology, database systems, and software engineering courses -- at both the Pensacola campus and the online campus. An adjunct instructor must have a Master's degree in a related discipline. Generally class sizes are 20-25 students for most of our courses. If anyone is interested please contact Laura J. White at 850.474.3017 and send a resume with specific interests.

The University has also expressed great interest in trying to get local area engineering and construction offices to give tours of offices/projects to students in order to give them a better idea of what the engineering profession is about. Please keep the SAME Post involved to help with any coordination efforts.

3. What has SAME Pensacola been up to?

The Board recently voted on providing funding assistance to the UWF section of the North West Florida Society of Women Engineers, in order to support sending 5 students to the SWE Annual Conference in Baltimore, MD. At our Jan 15th meeting they will give a short presentation on the conference.

Nov. 20th. The Post participated in a Habitat for Humanity rehab clean up. We prepared a habitat house for reoccupancy, previously built 3 years ago. A needy family will be able to move in very early next year; a great Christmas gift. “Making a difference, one family at a time...”
